

JFF just for fun

- Draw a sack of flour in which one of Tyndale's first English New Testaments was smuggled across the sea from Germany to the United Kingdom.
- Draw a big mountain in Russia. Mount El'brus is 18,481 feet tall—Europe's tallest peak!
- Draw an old feather pen in Germany. Here the Guttenberg Press made it possible to print the Bible, so people no longer needed to hand-copy it.
- Draw a ship's anchor where the Apostle Paul shipwrecked off the coast of Malta. (One of those anchors now rests in a museum on Malta!)

FYI for your info

- Most of Europe's 250 major languages have a Bible already, but Bible translation work continues in these ways: (1) in the old Plautdietsch (Low German) language, (2) in many European sign languages and (3) in groups from other areas where access to Bible translation assistance is limited.
- Bible translation teams work in the Russia Federation in dozens of Bibleless languages. Since Wycliffe Russia was formed in 2000, 8 workers have started translation projects.
